

Admir Qose is a PhD Candidate at South East European University in Tetovo, Macedonia. He is actually working on a specific topic in Macedonia's media domain. His thesis "The diversity in media reporting in Macedonia and its socio-political impact" investigates what does really incite inter-ethnic hatred in Macedonia, and in the meantime how to help the reconciliation process between communities.

He has a long experience in media (16 years) as a journalist, news editor and news presenter and he is very active in lecturing in different multi-ethnic NGO's in Macedonia, media institutions and schools about Journalism, Public and Political speech, Scenic Presentation in TV etc.

Along with journalism he developed his skills in translating – his hobby – working now for one of the world's largest internet companies as an Albanian linguist. He has contributed also in translating and editing university level textbooks from English into Albanian with a focus in International Relations, Political Science, History, and Pollution/Energy.

He speaks English, Italian and Macedonian. His last contribution is:

Publications:

- Qose, A. (2015). "International Preventive Intervention in Libya: Avoiding the Genocide", Logos-A, Skopje (book)